CONCURRENT SESSIONS

Corporate Relocations: Suburbia's Loss Is Downtown's Gain
2:00 p.m.—3:00 p.m.
Convention Center, 606-609
Major corporate relocations to highly urbanized environments have been occurring on an unprecedented scale. GE’s move to downtown Boston from suburban Connecticut is just one of the headlines; Weyerhaeuser’s move to downtown Seattle is another. Join us for a panel discussion that delves deeper into the real deal. How did these companies make the decision to go “all in” on urban? What factors did they consider? Were recruitment and retention of employees the driving considerations? Were costs considered, or productivity? How did they think about access to public transit, and did that influence the specific location choices? Did they consider multiple cities, and what type of criterion was used to compare cities or neighborhoods within cities?

Master-Planned Community Dynamics: Urban Infill vs. Greenfield Approaches
3:30 p.m.–4:30 p.m.
Convention Center, 618-620

Explore the new dynamics of successful master-planned development in urban infill locations and maturing suburban settings. What are the important lessons learned from conception, launch, and execution? How do suburban and urban development typologies inform each other? How can developers and practitioners in “conventional” MPC settings apply lessons learned from innovative urban mixed use to their projects, and vice versa?

Hear case-study examples of how the most creative developers, designers and marketers are approaching community building. You won’t want to miss this discussion of the latest thinking on MPC infrastructure and amenities, and the multidisciplinary discussion across urban and suburban development approaches.

Creative Disruption or Retail Apocalypse . . . Tectonic Changes to the Retail Landscape
3:30 p.m.–4:30 p.m.
Convention Center, 615-617

This panel will provide insights into major shifts in the retail industry and trends that are fueling its transformation. We will hear from experts in the retail industry who are innovating, disrupting, and pushing the boundaries of the retail experience. Panelists will examine the blurred lines and synergies between bricks-and-clicks and omnichannel sales from both the retailer’s and the owner’s perspectives, as well as the evolving performance metrics for this new paradigm. New and exciting ideas in retail design, technology, and amenities emerging in this changing retail landscape will also be discussed.

Learning in Real Time: Experts Share Their Forecasts for Real Estate in '17, '18, and '19
3:30 p.m.–4:30 p.m.
Convention Center, 606-609

The semiannual ULI Real Estate Consensus Forecast, a survey of leading industry experts, was just released. How is the new administration affecting the forecasts? How have they changed from six months ago? Where do the experts agree or disagree? Why? Where will the real estate industry be at the end of 2017? Will 2017 be a turning point for the industry—or will it be 2018? What’s the current thinking regarding the impact on real estate of the shifting interest-rate environment, global capital, and growth outside the major markets? Hear a lively debate between participating survey experts as they explain or defend their views. Ask questions or challenge the consensus about what lies ahead for the real estate industry in 2017 and beyond.
